Review Of The Online Dating Site True

When you first visit the online dating site True the one thing that you'll notice that sets them apart from all of the other "matchmaker" dating sites online is their concern for your safety.

They let you know that they run your name against a criminal database on all of their members and actively prosecute any person who "attempts" to commit adultery or any other criminal acts.

As a man, this really doesn't help or hurt your chances at attracting a woman on True.com unless you have a felony or a serious misdemeanor.

However, as many of you already realize True does this to attract more women on their site since it is pretty much a given that men will come in droves to any site that has or has the potential of having women interested in men.

Of course, the type of women by a large majority that a dating site online will attract with their main marketing gimmicks are safety and background checks are women who are overly cautious or who have already been involved with a man with whom a background check would have been best before she got involved.

In other words, as a man you can expect to deal with more women wanting you to jump through unnecessary hoops to meet and a greater chance of the women you do meet having a man in their recent past who you should be concerned with.

In the end, the matchmaking site True.com may or may not have more women online than your average dating site.

However, when signing up for a site like this, you need to make sure you have a system for success with women online already in place as well as being aware of any signs she may give you in regards to men in her past.
